Poker players may be divided into different categories of playing style s.

The most prominent of these is undoubtedly the Tight-Aggressive Player

; or TAG for short.

In

this article, we will examine:

Precisely what a tight-aggressive player is;

How you can spot them;

The starting hands that he typically plays;

How he differs from a loose-aggressive player (LAG);

How you can exploit him;

Defining Tight-Aggressive

Simply

put, a tight-aggressive player is one who tends to play ver y few starting hands. When he elects to play a hand, he generally plays it aggressivel y. He does not like to call with his strong hands but rather bets or raises to drive out opponents or make them pay a steep cost to see future cards.

This style of play differs from that of a rock or nit , who tends to play an even narrower range pre-flop (especiall) Tj T* BT aggressive player.

Identifying Tight-Aggressive Players

The simplest and most accurate method of identifying a tight-aggressive player is to watch how many hands he plays and how aggressively he plays them. If, after a couple of orbits, an opponent has played

15-20% of hands, typically with a raise or 3-bet, you are almost surel y dealing with a tight-aggressive player.

You can confirm this diagnosis by making sure to observe any hands that are shown down or otherwise exposed. If a large percentage of them are high-quality starting hands, you can conclude that your suspicions wer e correct.

You may also be able to accurately identify tight-aggressive op ponents even without waiting for a full two orbits. There are other secondary characteristics that typical tight-aggressive players display. They tend to keep their chips in eve
